

Adapting or translating PICS resources and publications

The Paediatric Integrated Cancer Service (PICS) is funded by the Victorian Government to lead a networked paediatric cancer care system in Victoria.

You are welcome to adapt or translate PICS publications for use within Australia and countries outside the Australia for non-commercial use only; the adapted or translated version must be made available free of charge to those who need it.

The information and content provided by PICS is made available for informational purposes for children and their families affected by cancer.

The following statement must be included in the adapted or translated version:

Adapted with permission from the publication [insert publication name], produced by the Victorian Paediatric Integrated Cancer Service – as cancer information for children and adolescents, and their families (<https://www.vics.org.au/pics>).

PICS accepts no responsibility for the accuracy of this adaptation [or translation].

PICS retains the full rights to its publications. Any requests from individuals or organisations to further adapt the adapted or translated version should be directed to PICS via email (pics.admin@rch.org.au).

You may make appropriate changes to the text to reflect differences in processes or procedures in your country or organisation. You may also make appropriate changes to reflect cultural differences. We do not supply original artwork. Please ensure that adapted versions include original artwork that differs from the PICS version.

Please send a pdf of the final resource to PICS at pics.admin@rch.org.au. We believe in minimising duplication of effort, so if we receive a request from another organisation to translate the publication into the same language, we will put them in touch directly with your organisation.

You may download, display, print and reproduce this material in unaltered form only (retaining this notice) for your personal, non-commercial use or use within your organisation.
